HEALTH & WELLNESS / SOCIAL & BUSINESS ENTREPRENEURSHIP PERSONAL STORIES INSPIRING ACTION

MORNING PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS (11 AM - 12:30 PM)

In an Instant

Author, mother and CBS This Morning contributor Lee Woodruff created a foundation for wounded veterans with husband/ABC News journalist Bob Woodruff after his traumatic injury from a roadside bomb while covering the Iraq war. With humor, Woodruff connects the commonalities of being a daughter, mother, friend, working woman and caregiver.

Building a Life That's True to You

Author, global speaker, playwright, actor and marketing-to-women expert Mary Lou Quinlan's latest book, The God Box, became a New York Times bestseller in just three weeks. She shares unique insight from her corporate and life make-overs, and offers 5 "half truths" that keep us from building a life that's true to who we are.

What's the Truth? Weeding through the Health Information Maze

With a doctorate in bioethics, Benita Zahn isn't your average health reporter. With a smart, witty conversation, she'll share how to evaluate reported studies, ask the right questions, grasp the useful, credible takeaways.

Transforming Stories of Change—Social Entrepreneurs

Regina Calcaterra's memoir "Etched in Sand" is a life-changing read of triumph against all odds that reached #2 on the NY Times bestseller list. Regina, an accomplished public and private sector attorney, foster care advocate, and recipient of numerous humanitarian awards, offers a compelling primer on how we can engage to change individual lives and communities.

"Drilling for Hope" author and social entrepreneur Karen Flewelling shares her philanthropic outreach story of bringing sustainable water solutions to impoverished communities around the globe. A retired teacher, Karen's organization of the same name has funded wells, educated children, donated goats, pigs, chickens, school supplies, soccer balls and food and medicine in 13 countries.
